

Parkhouse Bell reaffirms commitment to supporting the education and skills sector by becoming a Patron of the Association of Employment and Learning Providers

April 2017

Parkhouse Bell is delighted to announce that it has become a Patron of the Association of Employment and Learning Providers (AELP).

AELP is the leading trade association for vocational and learning providers in Britain. AELP's members train over 75% of England's 850,000 apprentices and over 70% of the Work Programme prime contractors are also members.

Parkhouse Bell is establishing itself as the number one recruitment agency for executive search and interim management assignments across the UK's education, skills and employability markets. As a Patron of the AELP, Parkhouse Bell is making a long-term commitment to building further strategic partnerships with organisations delivering services in these sectors.

Parkhouse Bell has a long-established relationship working with AELP and recently led the recruitment of several key senior management roles in the organisation, including CEO, Mark Dawe; COO, Jane Hickie; and Chief Policy Officer, Simon Ashworth.

Parkhouse Bell CEO, Matt Wells commented, "We are delighted to formalize our partnership with AELP by becoming a Patron. They provide a first-class service for their members, as has been demonstrated by their commitment to providing a voice for their members during the recent introduction of the Apprenticeship Levy. We are delighted to have the opportunity to work even more closely with them and their members."

AELP's COO, Jane Hickie, commented, "We are delighted to welcome Parkhouse Bell as a Patron. Their in-depth knowledge of our sector and the recruitment challenges our member organisations face will add real value."
