

Parkhouse Bell hosts inaugural CEO's Forum

May 2017

On the evening of 26th April, Parkhouse Bell was delighted to welcome Chief Executives from across its network of valued clients to an exclusive CEO Forum.

This exclusive forum was organised by Parkhouse Bell to create an opportunity for its clients to discuss the challenges and opportunities facing the employability and skills sector. Hosted by the Association of Employment and Learning Providers (AELP) CEO, Mark Dawe, the forum discussed a wide range of topics.

Unsurprisingly, the recently introduced Apprenticeship Levy and the upcoming Work and Health Programme were both discussed at length and our host shared a wealth of insight with the Forum. Held over dinner at the renowned restaurant Searcey's at the Gherkin, the Forum provided our CEO guests with a rare opportunity to network in a relaxed, informal setting.

Chris Peel, Managing Director of Interserve Learning and Employment commented: "The Forum was a great success and it was an excellent opportunity to discuss some of the upcoming challenges and opportunities for the sector and to share ideas. I'm already looking forward to the next Forum."

Regular Forums will be held throughout this year, with a range of topics planned for discussion centering around some of the key developments expected in the Education and Skills, Employment Services and Healthcare sectors.

Parkhouse Bell's Founder and Director of Executive Search and Senior Appointments, Helen McAnally, commented, "We have always prided ourselves on the added value that we bring to our clients. Our CEO Forums will play a key role in ensuring that our clients benefit from a service that goes way beyond the standard recruitment company experience."
